COLLECTION SUMMARY

This collection includes minute books, financial records, membership records, court records, histories and other manuscript materials from several churches in and around Southwestern Ohio.

SCOPE AND CONTENTS OF THE COLLECTION

The bulk of the Church Records Collection comes from local area Presbyterian churches, most notably the Presbyterian Church of Oxford and Hopewell Church in Preble County. The Presbyterian Church of Oxford was founded in 1818 and has a slightly convoluted history. In 1833 the church changed its name to the First Presbyterian Church of Oxford, and then in 1841 a small faction split from the church and became the Second Presbyterian Church of Oxford. In 1869 the two churches reunited and once again became simply, the First Presbyterian Church of Oxford. Then in 1926 the church officially changed its name to the Memorial Presbyterian Church of Oxford. The collection includes records from each variant of the church.

Hopewell Church in Preble County, which produced four daughter churches (three of which are represented in the collection, Fairhaven Church, United Presbyterian Church in Oxford, Ohio and United Presbyterian Church in Morning Sun, Ohio) has the most extensive selection of records available in the collection.

This collection begins with "A History of the South Carolina Presbyterian Migration, 1800-1833" written in 1939 by Mrs. Ila Lemon from Morning Sun, Ohio. This paper, prepared for the Monday Club of Oxford, Ohio, details the growing discontent in the Presbyterian Churches of Scotland and Ireland over the interference of the State on the church government. The disgruntled members split from the Church to form the Reformed Presbyterians and the Associate Presbyterians (these two branches would later unite to form the Reformed Associate Presbyterians, a group that worked hard to ban slavery in their denomination) and subsequently immigrated to South Carolina and surrounding regions. Many times entire congregations would follow their pastor to the New World, as was the case with Thomas Clark, who traveled from Ireland with three hundred of his followers. The paper also details the migration of several Presbyterian families from South Carolina to surrounding areas, most notably southwestern Ohio and Indiana, and the ensuing formation of the Hopewell Associate Reformed Church with Rev. Alexander Porter as its first pastor.

Another history found in the collection is volume six of "The Presbyterian Historical Almanac and Annual Remembrances of the Church for 1864" by Joseph M. Wilson, the purpose of which, as stated in Wilson's introduction, is to "Preserve the Current History of the Church as shown in the Acts and Deliverances of her highest courts." Wilson's Almanac provides insight into the workings of the Presbyterian Church, including notes from the 75th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America, which met in Peoria, Illinois as well as notes on meetings of general assemblies and synods from around the country. The Almanac also features biographies and portraits of recently deceased Ministers and important members of the church, records of students currently enrolled or graduated from different seminaries and personal and financial statistics of the United Presbyterian Church of North America.

Many of the churches included in the collection also have individual histories included in their records. Most of these histories are not meant to be comprehensive, but rather a concise summary of the main historical events. One such history, located in the records for Bath Church, appears to be a speech written for the centennial of the church by Grace Miller. "The Story of the Second Synod of The United Presbyterian Church of North America" starts with a note from the author stating "It is the purpose of the writer that simplicity and brevity shall characterize the story told here." The Oxford United Methodist Church includes a short history in their records including names of the founding members. The Hopewell Church records include several brief histories, including a history written by Rev. Edward Paxton, a history prepared for the Diamond Jubilee in 1951 and a "History of Old Hopewell Congregation" written by Rev. N.C. McDill.

Most of the records available in the collection are minute books, detailing what went on during each session meeting. After its formation the Presbyterian Church of Oxford went through several name changes, divisions and reunions. The minute books in the collection provide firsthand accounts of these events, such as when the church split into the First Presbyterian Church and the Second Presbyterian Church of Oxford in 1841. According to the session minutes of the First Presbyterian Church of Oxford, "The last two or three years, in Which Mr. Graham was our Pastor, a considerable number of the members of the church had almost ceased attendance upon its public ordinances." The congregation tried to keep the church united and had thought the issue was resolved when on the next Sabbath "Mr. Graham...informed the congregation, that all the Elders of the Church, and all the trustees with the exception of one, had resigned, and that about sixty of its members, whose names he read, had withdrawn from us. These who have seceded from us...resolved to form a Second Presbyterian Church of Oxford, attached to the New School Presbyterians." This left the First Presbyterian Church scrambling to elect new officials and find a new pastor. The same event is covered from the other point of view, in the session minutes of the newly formed Second Presbyterian Church of Oxford. "Agreeable to a notice given the following persons met at the house of R.E. Hills and organized a church to be called the Second Presbyterian Church of Oxford." The minutes then go on to describe the election of officials and plans to procure funds to build a new meeting house. It is also recorded in the session minutes for both churches when the two factions decided to reunite in 1869.

The minute books don't just provide insight into significant church events, but also offer details of daily tasks as well. Many entries deal with the election of church officials, such as Elders, trustees, treasurer and moderator. Some entries are records of new members received into the church, while others provide a record of those members dismissed from the church. The Session Book of Bath Presbyterian Church in Franklin County, Indiana starts with this entry dated November 1st 1833, "A Communication came before the session signed by 19 members of the church, two of whom were Elders; in which they request a dismissal from the church and a certificate of their regular standing in it---The reasons they give for this request are, the...departure of many from the primitive state of Presbyterianism in America...and particularly the evils existing in this church and because they know their views on some important points materially differ from those of the church.”

Minutes from a session on May 29th 1864, from the records of the Presbyterian Church of Harmony Indiana reads “Session met and was constituted by prayer, when Emily Craft appeared before the session and was examined on her religious experience. When having made a satisfactory profession of her faith in her Lord Jesus Christ, was admitted to the sealing ordinances of the Lord’s Supper and Baptism. Closed by prayer.”

The session minutes from the Presbyterian Church of Oxford detail the resignation of their pastor, after becoming ill. The entry for May 3, 1896 reads “Meeting of session was held Sabbath morning before service to consider Mr. Bierce’s resignation...The clerk then read the following communication from Mrs. Bierce: ‘Since in the providence of God my beloved husband was struck down while performing his duties, March 25, and since physician and friends, who are familiar with such cases think that there is no reasonable probability of his resuming pulpit labor soon, I, therefore, on behalf of Mr. Bierce and at his request, ask the officers of the church to regard the pulpit as vacant’...In view of all the facts in the case the above resignation was on motion, unanimously accepted.”

Another resource housed in the collection is account records. Many times financial information was logged in with the session minutes, however the collection includes several treasury books. An entry in the Hopewell Church account records lists various services rendered to the church, such as “to William Bell for taking care of linen” with corresponding compensation, in this case, William Bell received $3.00, and on Oct. 28, 1873 Rev. J MacHatton received $10.00 cash. The financial records also contain subscription lists and delinquency lists. The Hopewell Church records contain a number of loose leaf receipts and promissory notes, for instance a slip of paper dated Nov. 19, 1822 tells us that Rev. Alexander Porter received his salary of “$500 in full for the year ending October 20th 1820.”

There are several areas of the collection that hold information such as baptismal records, death records, marriage records, and membership information. Again, many churches included this information in their minute books. In some cases the information is interspersed throughout and in other cases there are separate sections, usually at the end of the log book, dedicated to this information. However Hopewell Church kept a separate log book of Baptismal records for 1835 to 1870, which includes information such as the child’s name, the parents’ names, date of birth, and date of baptism.

Hopewell Church also has a large section of loose leaf membership information in the collection. Numerous certificates and dismissals make up the bulk of these membership records and show the process of moving between different churches. An example is a note carried by William and Rebecka Ramsey from Ebenezer Church, stating “We do hereby certify that William Ramsey and Rebecka his wife has lived in this congregation for three years past, has behaved in a Christian able way, is in full communion with us, we do hereby recommend them to any Christian church where God in his providence may cast their lot.” With this note in hand the Ramseys were received as members into the Hopewell Church. Robert McQuiston was dismissed from the United Presbyterian congregation of Morning Sun in a similar manner, “That Robert McQuiston is a member in full communion in the United Presbyterian congregation...and is hereby dismissed at his own request is attested this 10th day of August 1877.”

The collection also includes cemetery records for Hopewell Church. These records, compiled in 1966, contain the names and dates copied from the grave markers of the Hopewell Cemetery and are organized by row.

Court records from Hopewell Church supply more details into Christian life during the 19th century. Records feature cases brought against congregation members for a variety of infractions including adultery, slander, intoxication, gambling and lying. An understanding of the church judicial process is gained through the records, including issuing a libel, gathering evidence and testimony, and rendering judgment and punishment. One such record contains the affidavit of a witness as follows, “Gentlemen, I received some days ago a written citation from you requesting me to meet you on tomorrow to give evidence in a certain case there and then pending against James Bell. I think it is almost impossible for me to attend, but I would say to you, and I would say to the young man that I could not make oath that he drank liquor of any kind on the day referred to, for I did not see him, but I would say that he certainly appeared to me to be guilty of very unchristian conduct, insomuch that the people about generally supposed that he was intoxicated, and that he was attempting to cheat Mr. Wilson out of his horse. This friends, is about the amount of my evidence, if I was present and under oath, signed Joseph Patten.”

There are also records on proceedings to determine the truthfulness of the witnesses, as in the case of Thomas Paxton. After hearing testimony from several people, the session “retired to consider the testimony. And with the testimony which the accused had brought forward in support of his challenge of her being witness...the session decided that their opinion... she ought not to be admitted to give her testimony in the case of the libel preferred against Thomas Paxton.”

Information on church societies was also sometimes included in the church minute books, as is the case with the United Presbyterian Church in Morning Sun, Ohio. However the collection does include several separate records of church societies. The Women’s Societies of the Memorial Presbyterian Church of Oxford produced small pamphlets listing society members, officers, a calendar of events and committees. The pamphlets from 1942-1947 can be found in the collection. The Men’s League of the Presbyterian Church of Oxford kept their own separate minute book for the year 1905-1906, which is also housed in the collection.

The records for Hopewell Church include the sermons given by Rev. William Edward Paxton between the years 1880-1905. They are the original copies handwritten by Paxton and include many of his revisions and changes as well as notes and questions. One such note has Paxton’s sermon divided into sections A and B and outline the major points he would like to make in both. Under section A is written “Our duty to be careful to maintain good works, strive earnestly. Why? 1. God is glorified, 2. Blessing to us, 3. God remembers them.” The two sections are then followed by a section of notes on what Paxton hopes his congregation will learn from the sermon.

The collection includes a copy of the Journals of Nettie Harper, from the years 1867 to 1876. Nettie was fifteen at the time she began her journal, with the hopes of someday becoming a published writer, and she fully expected her journals to be read by others. Nettie and her family were members of Hopewell Church and her journals include information not only on church life, but also on the daily lives of her family, neighbors and fellow congregation members. An entry dated Jan. 19, 1868 describes the sermon given by Mr. McHatton and Nettie’s reaction. “It was a most excellent sermon, yes, and solemn too. Mr. McHatton seems so earnest...Sometimes when he fixed his eyes upon me with such a yearning and earnest look, as if he longed for my salvation (and I know he does) I could not stand it, and was obliged to cast my eyes down.” The entry for April 19, 1868 supplies more insight into church membership, stating “twelve were received as members of this congregation today. On certificate, two...on examination, ten.” Another entry, from Jan. 24, 1868, offers Nettie’s thoughts on her own life: “What a thing this book will be. Always what I have been doing, like as though I ever did anything. I think at the end of a year it would pay to count how many times I have ironed the family linen.”

ORGANIZATION OF THE COLLECTION

This collection of church records is organized first by type of church, in alphabetical order by name of church. Then, items are listed by type of records for each church, in chronological order.
